

EVENT OVERVIEW

Over recent years, NSW councils and local water utilities (LWUs) have confronted several complex and unprecedented challenges in providing safe water to their communities. Although recent rain has restored coastal dam levels, many inland towns continue to face the prospect of “day zero” - when water supplies dry up. Meanwhile, the devastating bushfires have exposed water supplies and catchments to the risk of contamination, potentially compromising existing, dwindling water supplies.

The virtual 2020 LGNSW Water Management Conference will feature case studies and learnings from these experiences, focusing on building preparedness, capacity and resilience.
